

ABSTRACT

Described are various methods of detecting and analyzing protein interactions in a cell. The specific protein interaction is detected by a permanent signal generated by a recombinase activity or protease activity that depends on the protein interaction.